Our purpose is to help older people be happy, safe and confident in our digital world.

We host regular events which are free of charge and open to everyone. Most events include opportunities for one-to-one advice sessions and we have an easy access to an online library to help digital users.

We ask people we meet what they like doing, be it talking with friends, travelling, photographing or something else. We then discuss how digital devices, online services like free communications and the internet could be useful.

Online safety is important so we like talking about digital worries. Many people we meet have lost trust in the digital world; it is not surprising since our news media frequently headline cyber attacks and how people are tricked into losing money by online fraudsters.

It is inevitable, however, that more of our everyday activities will be done digitally. Our events give us the chance to explain digital terminology using plain language.

Our ambition is to help older people enjoy being online and show them how to take sensible and easy precautions to stay safe.
